No MV support, don't waste your money on this program.. Very much like the original XCOM, but with good improvements: You can do airstrikes. Eventually you can nuke sites. Although as far as I can tell I need a 1/2 billion dollars to get that option. You can choose from several options when looking at a mission. The landing zone for your troops is selectable; I always hated the transport in Xcom's positioning for starting a mission. The strategic map is great.

Things I would like to see improved:

Movement in the real time tactical battles; The guys get stuck sometimes, especially the people being rescued.

More troops on the ground. Four really isn't enough.

A little more variety in the missions.

Knowing how much the mission is worth, before you do it.

Reduced price on some of the equipment.

You find new scientists, doctors and such useful people in rescue missions. The missions don't tell you the likelihood of finding a particular troop.

These are just suggestions. The game is pretty fun.

Overall, well worth the 12.99. I can see myself wasting a lot of my time on this game.. Pretty neat but ultimately its a commercial that I paid for. Would recommend if it was free.

The sounds of the crunching Doritos actually made me want them after I was done. Why not make this a free game and capitalize on that marketing?

Pros:

Looks cool V Good graphics

Interesting

Didn't give me VR Sickness

Cons:

REALLY sort

No replay value

$3 too much

Really an ad. Don't buy if you have a new computer, there are many graphic glitches, such as half of the screen missing, as well as an inability to use the sniper.(everything goes disco pink) I purchased this for 79cents and now am short 79cents.

Also, the green beret sounds like a viking.

>,(. Flight Control HD is one of these games that I'm willing to try because it seems easy and fun. It's not my type of game but being older made me more open towards new genres. The first time I've reviewed it on Steam with a few words were in 2010. I'm not surprised that I had the game since that time: I was probably influenced by the cheerful screenshots.

Your goal is to land aircrafts on the right path, avoiding also collisions between them. The more you advance, the more aircrafts you'll have on your screen, and the more difficult it will be to manage everything. Also, you'll unlock new airfields: island, jungle, snow (as part of an old Christmas stuff), circus (where you have to go through portals), etc..

It's very fun and makes you very aware of what is happening on your screen: some aircrafts are faster than others and it may be a problem at one moment (if their paths are crossing each other). Also, they're coming from every part and they're also different: choppers, big aircrafts, biplanes, military jets, etc.. You can easily spot them because of their shapes but also of their different bright colors (that's also how you can spot the right lane to land). It's a true challenge to manage every one of them once your screen is full of them.

Don't worry though for a collision, you're warned about them: the aircrafts are circled with red and you have, if I remember correctly, a little alarm going off. Also, you're warned from which side they're coming.

With a perfect landing, you'll be rewarded by a text in different languages, congratulating you. Everything is done to make you proud and also to encourage you to keep the good work.

The graphics are very colorful and simple and it's perfect for that type of game. Besides, the soundtrack is very cheerful.

Flight Control HD is really a little good game on PC, even if I can see the potential of it on any tablet or mobile device. However, while the game is for everyone, I can also understand that some players will be frustrated by the collisions and the repetitive gameplay: you're landing aircrafts by making them follow a path, praying that no other will cross them unless you decide that it's worth a shot given the speed of each vehicle.

I've played the game a lot for the achievements. I remember mainly one not unlocking despite being sure to have met the requirements but I suppose that it wasn't clear enough for me, or it was my English, or it was just the wrong use of words.

As I've said, the game was released in 2010. The game is still fun to play today, however, after a little search, the PC version is the less updated: the Android/iOS applications have more content or were at least updated until 2015. The Mac version has an exclusive map too.

I had fun with that game and I never regretted that purchase.. Nice and spectacular game for all fans of Tetris-style platformers.. I played the original Junk Jack on IOS and then they released Junk Jack X and I was very addicted I switched over to android and it is not on the android store. So one day when I was looking through the list of early access games and I was overjoyed to find it there and I immediately bought it and it is pretty much Junk Jack and Junk Jack X mixed into one very good game (mainly the music is mixed into one game). The music is great (just saying). C:> Program files(x86)> Steam> Steamapps> common> Dungeon Escape> Soundtrack>

The only good part about the game, well done, Hatebit.. Not a very enjoyable game. I can somewhat understand it being OK on a mobile device when you have some time to kill on the bus or train but it is a bit silly to run it on a pc.

First of all, there is not really any music to accompany the robot, which I think is a bit sad! The little guy is on a mining trip, he could atleast whistle a merry tune!

The mechanics are a bit simple and dull. There is a prize somewhere that you need to find but there is no real challenge of getting the prize. Yes, you run out of energy and equipment but is super easy to just hop back to the surface and replenish everything instantly without any cost.

As long as you keep a lazy eye on the energy level and can count to 9 (amount of ladders to get back up again), then you can beat the game quite easily. The levels are just a matter of time then. I did not play a whole lot of it, as I got bored with it within 5 minutes of playing this. Not a good sign for a game, I feel.

Not a very enjoyable experience, I'm sorry to say.

Certified fast. Actually too fast, the game is seriously difficult from the very start.. It freezes at the same spot everytime. My son was disappointed.. Great time killer cheap too. The best $0.79 I have ever spent!. This game has so many flaws but I still completed it. If you are fan of Dungeon Master you will like it but for non hard core fans there are many better games of that type.. In charge of desperate, scared folk who do not see the big picture when it comes to the risk you make them take. Surrounded by a fog that literally manipulates reality; summoning the most nightmarish of imagery from the darkest corners of our minds.

A gun toting military thats off the rails and a group of psychos who believe they are the meek meant to inherent the earth. And all of this you're going to play chicken with while pushing the throttle to its fullest, heading for a sunrise you can only see in your mind.

Well...Ozzy wasn't kidding it seems.. I like this DLC not as much for the layout blind and decoys but more for its great shotguns with various ammo available right away. Player needs to get some XP and shotgun weapon score to have access to most base game shotguns and ammo, but these are available right away and help tremendously if you're a new player or replaying missions again for some reason. Hunting geese is also fun, of course, and shotguns can also be used to hunt rabbits. I actually hunted more rabbits than geese with these shotguns.. very scary and funny game, nice to play with friends. Nice arcade game!
